This practical workshop is open to anyone who would like to explore this fascinating and controversial voice quality.

Estill's research on Belting has defined the acoustic and physiological characteristics of this loud, bright, brassy sound of Belting. This exciting voice quality can be made without any danger to vocal health when produced correctly and efficiently. We focus on the Estill tools to produce this sound in a safe and sustainable way and explore this quality in repertoire via demonstrations and an 'open session' in the afternoon.
